

ALGOMA FLORA

Jack-in-the-Pulpit

This woodland perennial likes to grow in moist shady locations and is native to Canada. The flower is pitcher shaped with a top that protects the pollen from being drenched in rain water. In late summer, their bright red berries feed birds and animals but beware as they should not be ingested or touched.

Art Gallery of ALGOMA